2 interesting actions that the game must support are generating a random cheese spawn location and generating random movements for the cats without needlessly backtracking.

I initially thought that both of these actions should be encapsulated in their own classes but I realized that they need to communicate with the Maze class to find valid spawn points/movements. Therefore, the generation of the cheese spawn location and cat movements should be done in the Game class where information is shared.